

PUBLIC QUESTIONS TO COUNCIL – 22 MAY 2009

Question from Mr P McKay, Leominster, Herefordshire.

In reply to my question of 6 March 2009 regarding the signing of unmetalled unclassified roads shown by Ordnance Survey as “other routes with public access” and referred to in Rights of Way Improvement Plan as Quiet Lanes, Council said that the low cost Quiet Lanes signs would not be appropriate and that other signage would require careful consideration.

- 1.1 Has Council now had time to consider and what conclusion has it come to, and failing that if they could be signed as “other route with public access” to correspond with the Ordnance Survey designation? Such signs could be low cost similar to footpath signs and abbreviated ORPA, as any signage would be an improvement compared with no signs since some of these roads are not readily identifiable as being open for public use.
