Each person is different and needs an individual approach - one size does not fit all	16
Society needs to be more informed/have training about what the spectrum is and more accepting and caring of autistic people and willing to change behaviours	11
Perception that autistic people are difficult, demanding, annoying, etc needs to be challenged	7
Lack of knowledge of what autism actually is and the different types - stereotypes in media do not help	6

How autism presents in women and girls	5
Recognition that autism is a different way of thinking and processing	4
Lack of understanding by professionals	4
Better training for professionals	3
Autistic people not supported to reach their full potential	2
Better understanding of what masking is and how stressful this is for the individual	2

Q22 What could we do to improve public understanding of autism?

Case studies/autism ambassadors at events and training - people with diagnosis telling their stories and how they can be successful with the right support	15
Better understanding, support, (mandatory) training and toolkits and adjustments in the workplace	12
National emphasis e.g. TV programmes, characters with autism in soaps/drama, campaigns, training, events	9
Education reform, better integration, wider acceptance and opportunities in schools - don't hide autism, embrace it	9
Need to work on normalisation of autism within society, more work within schools about understanding, adaptations and support, etc	8
Better understanding and recognition of how autism presents and the referral process by professionals, teachers, SEN, doctors, health workers, etc	8
Better understanding of the autism community needs - listen to, engage with, respond to and involve us	8
Using the right media in local areas to access residents - e.g. local Facebook groups, local newspapers, news programmes, social media, video blogs, etc	7
More opportunities for work experience/employment	5
Recognition that autism not "one size fits all", different for individuals	4
Early diagnosis/assessment and comprehensive targeted positive support	4
Local focus on success is for high functioning autistics and distracts from others in different parts of the spectrum, especially learning disabled	4
Autism needs to be recognised within the wider diversity and inclusion agenda/field - acceptance	3
Problem of greater understanding of autism not easy to address as people who are not affected by it probably wouldn't be interested anyway.	3
Show the struggles as well as successes	3
SEN professionals need knowledge and training about laws around SEN and disability rights.	3

Teachers to have greater understanding and in-depth training about the varying degrees of autism	3
More awareness about how autistic needs can vary significantly day to day - some days fully functioning, the next not at all	2
Good/better education at school about autism	2
